LOUISIANA WATERCOLOR SOCIETY

From the President

The world of watercolor is truly a wondrous place and the 43rd Louisiana Watercolor Society Exhibition represents watercolor at its finest. Beginning with award winning RANCH FOREMAN by A. L. Feng to Sy Ellens' BLUE RIVER to SLATED AS AN ABODE by Carol Frye, all styles and approaches are represented. The richness of color and technical expertise demonstrate the high quality of the 75 accomplished artists who were chosen by juror Cindy Agan to participate this year from the hundreds of entrants submitted from around the world. Cindy proved to be a most accomplished juror and demonstrated her expertise with all who met her. She received glowing praise for her generosity in sharing her knowledge and experience during the portrait workshop. We all appreciate her contributions in helping to make the 43rd International Exhibition a success.

The Garden District Gallery proved to be a grand and gracious venue for hosting the show and Patty Adams and her staff curated the show to each painting's best advantage. With the organizational skills of chairperson Susan Copping and her committee all phases of the event came off without a hitch. Special thanks go to Annie Strack, Phil Gillen and Jeannie and Rick Wilke for their efforts in attaining sponsors, to Monica Bishara and Louise Hansen for producing the catalog, Susan Henning for chairing the workshop, and last, but not least, Karen and Tom Stakelum, Roni Thomas, Jean Mitchell, Diane Newman and Cathy Goodier for all their hard work. Once again our faithful art material companies demonstrated support with their generous sponsorships.

Congratulations go to all who entered and to those who were accepted in this year's exhibition. Not all of you may have received a prize but you are all winners! It is important that all of us who share this love of painting in watercolor continue to develop our skills and knowledge and support this brotherhood of art. In the words of Henry Miller I say to you, "Paint as you like and die happy".

Juror's Statement

Cindy Agan LWS

It is a great honor and a privilege to judge the 43rd international Exhibition of the Louisiana Watercolor Society. It was a pleasure to work with the show committee and thanks to their tireless work this show remains one of the best.

The exceptional paintings selected for this exhibit showcase watercolor at its finest. I was impressed by the incredible talent shown in the hundreds of entries and I thank the accomplished watercolorists who submitted their paintings. It takes courage to create a work of art and offer it up to be judged. The final decision was difficult given the limited number of works allotted and, regrettably, many artists that deserved recognition could not be included in the show. Judging art is subjective and those works not accepted may go on to win top awards in the next competition. To those artists, I say do not be discouraged and continue to paint with passion.

Careful consideration was given to each submission over the course of several days and the paintings that I selected have a wide range in style, subject matter and diverse use of watercolor from transparent washes to the opaque.

Whether the paintings presented themselves as loose abstraction or labor intense realism, each showed great skill with the medium. At first glance, I could appreciate those works of art that were technically well executed but looking further, they emerged as strong compositions and exceeded in creative design. Many were imaginative and had emotional impact, some were filled with excitement and drama and all were admired and selected for their brilliant use of color and light.

Congratulations to the winning participants and I thank you for sharing the gift of your talent to create this beautiful collection of works.

Radford, VA

22"x30"

Ranch Foreman
$2500

Ranch Foreman is a local farmer living nearby. I tried to use all the watercolor techniques to capture his soul. I did a drawing study first. Then I used wet on wet, wet on dry and dry brush to fine detail of his face and his eyes... Working on a watercolor portrait is very exciting job which will take lot of time to get right but I really enjoy painting watercolor portraits.
